MARKET REVIEW

During the quarter, the S&P/ASX 200 Total Return Index gained 4.7%. Materials rose 20.5% mostly due to strength in Gold producers. Consumer Discretionary lifted 10.0% as tax cuts and the rates outlook lifted customer demand. Healthcare dropped 9.3% weighted by CSL and continued uncertainty around US pharmaceutical tariffs.

The S&P 500 gained 8.1% (in USD) in the September quarter vs pcg. Markets were buoyed by a 25bp U.S. Federal Reserve rate cut and continued optimism around Artificial Intelligence (AI) spend. MSCI China Total Return Index leapt 20.7% (in USD) as policy measures stabilised sentiment.

The Australian reporting season was very volatile, especially for large cap stocks that missed expectations on outlook e.g. CSL, James Hardie, and Woolworths. Net, earnings growth expectations across the S&P/ASX 200 for FY26 were downgraded by c2% to +6.5%, with most sectors experiencing downgrades with the exception of Real Estate and Financials. Companies called out Victoria as suffering weak demand due to high taxes, poor productivity and consumer theft. The results also conveyed a soft consumer and housing environment in the US, with companies citing lower fast-moving-consumer-goods (FMCG) volumes, softening US house prices and sales activity. The industrial names Brambles and Ansell performed well due to underlying productivity improvements which helped margins and cashflow.

The Bloomberg Commodities Index ticked up 3.6% (in USD). Gold rose 16.8% (in USD) on central bank demand. Iron Ore rose 9.6% on Chinese stimulus and Lithium 9.5% on inventory restocking (both in USD). Brent crude oil eased 0.9% as OPEC+ raised supply and LNG dropped 15.8% on soft demand due to mild weather (all in USD).

PERFORMANCE

The portfolio returned 837bps, outperforming the ASX200 by 366bps over the quarter net of fees.

Contributors/Detractors

Positives

Newmont (NEM) - Overweight:

Outperformed on a surging gold price and record free cash flow.

Lynas (LYC) - Overweight:

Jumped on a US Department of Defence deal with MP Materials, the first evidence of an ex-China rare earth supply chain being established.

CBA (CBA) - Underweight:

De-rated on weaker than expected Net Interest Margin guidance.

Seek (SEK) - Overweight:

Rose on higher yield progress and evidence of operating leverage for the first time in many years.

Electro Optic Systems (EOS) - Overweight:

Outperformed on significant new orders related to laser counter drone capabilities.

Negatives

Xero (XRO) - Overweight:

Underperformed on concerns AI could disrupt its competitive position.

Westpac (WBC) - Underweight:

Advanced on a solid core Net Interest Margin and beat from volatile Markets.

Treasury Wine (TWE) - Overweight:

Underperformed soft Chinese and US demand trends and distribution changes in California.

Insurance Australia Group (IAG) - Overweight:

Underperformed on broader financials sell-off.

ANZ Group (ANZ) - Underweight:

Advanced on cost out and restructuring announcements.

Portfolio Changes

Purchases

BHP (BHP):

Increased as the outlook for its Iron ore and Copper improved.

Newmont (NEM):

Preferred exposure to Gold due to a stable production profile.

Brambles (BxB):

Increased as asset efficiency initiatives continue to underpin strong earnings growth and portfolio defensiveness was increased.

A2 Milk (A2M):

Increased post clarity around downstream acquisition and continued evidence around market share gain in China.

Life 360 (360):

New position. A fast-growing family safety app with new revenue opportunities including advertising, pets and elderly.

Sales

ResMed (RMD):

Trimmed due to strong performance.

Commonwealth Bank (CBA):

Increased the underweight position as the rotation from banks to resources gathered momentum.

South 32 (S32):

Sold on declining alumina prices and operational issues in Western Australia.

Cleanaway (CWY):

Exited on lower confidence in earnings delivery.

Woodside (WDS):

Exited on a deteriorating oil and LNG outlook.

ESG ENGAGEMENT

During the quarter we undertook a total of 46 engagements in which we discussed ESG matters, including 32 companies relevant to the strategy. The majority of meetings during the quarter were held at the board or executive level, with some being post-results meetings and others with the Chair in advance of the AGM. In addition to climate change, environmental management, ethical conduct and stakeholder relations issues were notable topics of interest for the team.

In addition to our post-results meeting in the quarter, we met with members of the Coles Group (COL) sustainability team for a deep dive on responsible sourcing, especially of Tasmanian farmed salmon.

INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT

In June we went to Tasmania to see practices and speak to salmon suppliers first-hand, which informed our questioning of Coles' due diligence. While Coles is being more cautious around ethically sourced labelling given salmon from Macquarie Harbour in particular is a source of some community concern, we were pleased to see the robustness of the company's approach. It has strong relationships with a range of Tasmanian stakeholders and undertakes thorough due diligence to understand potential environmental harms from salmon farming.

Additionally, we three engagements with the Commonwealth Bank (CBA) during the quarter, covering the FY25 financial results and a number of ESG topics. We discussed AI and potential job impacts, compliance and non-financial risk management, as well as how CBA has successfully driven cultural change. We also discussed the refreshed physical climate risk analysis that had been undertaken, and sought more detail on how CBA is responding to the potential for under-insurance in the home loans portfolio to affect the bank's own risk profile. CBA is looking to collaborate with the insurance sector and government stakeholders on this given the shared nature of the problem.

OUTLOOK AND POSITIONING

We are moderately cautious on short-term market prospects due to a combination of exuberance around AI stocks, extended valuations in equities, and emergence of softer consumer and employment conditions in the U.S., just as tariff policies kick into effect. Recent volatility in the long end of the yield curve and surging Gold prices also portend some level of risk off / aversion may be pending. The US S&P500 market is trading on an expensive 25.0x December 2025 Price/Earnings ratio.

On the economic front, the U.S. data has been mixed of late resulting in the Fed's evolving stance towards interest rate cuts. Futures are pricing ~50bp more of cuts by year-end, which may support economic activity. In Australia, the economic picture is also resilient with signs that the domestic consumer is in good shape after an 18-month period of 'cost of living' increases. We are seeing signs of job ad declines moderating and consumer discretionary spending increasing, which all point to a consumer in reasonable shape. However, the recent jump in inflation to 3.0% in August, and 'hawkish' commentary from the RBA in September, has resulted in a pushout of rate cut expectations to April 2026, so the economy is unlikely to benefit from any further rate relief short-term. The Australian economy is expected to grow real GDP at a modest 2.2% in 2026.

Top 5 active positions (Overweight)

- Newmont
- BHP
- Seek
- Coles
- Xero

The portfolio is modestly defensively positioned given the confluence of: 1) persistent momentum in the way of PE expansion with no apparent catalyst to derail this; albeit 2) extended valuation as a starting point; 3) signs of soft employment and consumer and housing demand in US.

The portfolio is overweight Materials principally due to favourable views on Gold (via Newmont and Northern Star) given continual central bank buying, and rare earth (via Lynas). The US Department of Defence's deal with MP Materials provides clear evidence of an ex-China rare earth supply chain being established to provide the US with self-sufficiency as rare earths is a key input into defence equipment such as sensors, motors, lasers, and magnets.

Within Communications, Seek is a name where we have increased conviction post results. Despite a lacklustre job growth environment in Australia and Asia, Seek increased its placement share and achieved double digit yield growth through higher ad tiers and new products, which bodes even better for operating leverage when volumes do return to growth. We also anticipate the market to attribute greater value to Seek's Growth fund as the liquidity window draws near.

The portfolio also added a number of smaller Technology stocks where we see strong growth and attractive valuation. Qoria was an example, it is a globally leading software player in student online safety specialising in monitoring and intervention of inappropriate content. This is a large addressable market supported by regulation, and Qoria is growing strongly through growth in school adoption and cross-selling of multiple products.

The portfolio is underweight Financials principally due to Banks where valuations are at very stretched levels despite a lacklustre earnings growth profile.
